TIMEKEEPING AND MEAL PERIOD / REST BREAK ATTESTATION POLICY

The Company recently added a new “Attestation Process” to our employee timekeeping system to further ensure compliance with the Company’s timekeeping and meal period and rest break policies. This Attestation Process is detailed below. It is important that you understand what the Attestation Process means and how to use it.

Attestation Process

At the close of every workday, each nonexempt employee will be required during their last punch of the day to respond to a ‘timekeeping and meal/rest break attestation’ prompt, to confirm and approve that all their recorded hours and punches that day are accurate (verifying compliance with the Company’s timekeeping, meal period and rest break policies).

By clicking Accept, you will be certifying that the following is true:

1. All of my hours recorded for the workday are complete and accurate.
2. I was provided with all meal periods and was authorized and permitted to take all rest and recovery periods to which I was entitled in compliance with the Company’s policies during the workday, except any that I previously reported to my supervisor/Operations Director and/or Human Resources.
3. I have not violated any Company policy during the workday, including, but not limited to, the Company’s policy against working off-the clock.
4. I understand that I may raise any concerns about my ability to take meal periods or rest breaks, or any instruction or pressure to work "off-the-clock," or incorrectly reporting my time worked at any time without fear of retaliation.

If each and all of the above statements are true, you should select the “Accept” option during your last punch of the day, approving your recorded hours for that day. If one or more of the above statements are not true, then you should select the “Reject” option and then immediately report the discrepancies to your supervisor and/or Human Resources. Your supervisor will work with you and Human Resources to correct your timecard.

Examples of when you should reject the attestation statement:

- If your recorded hours for the day are incorrect;
- If you performed work while not clocked in;
- If you forgot to clock out or in for your meal period;
- If you were not authorized and permitted to take a rest period in accordance with Company policy; and
- If you were not provided a meal period in accordance with Company policy.

EMPLOYEE ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF TIMEKEEPING AND MEAL PERIOD / REST BREAK ATTESTATION POLICY

By signing below, I acknowledge that I have received, reviewed, received training on, and understand the Company's Timeclock and Meal Period / Rest Break Attestation Policy. I agree to abide by this policy fully and understand that I may ask questions about this policy and raise concerns about my ability to take meal periods or rest breaks, or any instruction or pressure to work "off-the-clock" or incorrectly report my time worked at any time without fear of retaliation.
